About UPS

Established in 2012, it is one of the youngest universities in Central and Eastern Europe; however, its former independent colleges look back to its faculties much earlier. The Zrínyi Miklós National Defence University was officially established in 1996. Still, it had several predecessors dating back to the early nineteenth century.

The most notable is the Royal Hungarian Ludovika Academy, which was established on 8 November 1808. The academy was not only the first Hungarian military higher educational institution but was acknowledged to be on an equal level as the Theresian Military Academy in Austria in 1897, making the Ludovika Academy an internationally renowned centre for military sciences and officer training. After the renovation, the campus centre was equipped with up-to-date technology and infrastructure while keeping its original trademarks in a neo-classicist style. The Orczy Park and its surroundings provide an area of 73,700 square metres (18.2 acres) for the new campus altogether.

The university's primary goal is to educate future public administration officials and military and law enforcement officers (through BA and MA programmes) and to develop current public service members (through different training programmes). Moreover, UPS also functions as a think tank for public service (through PhD programmes, joint conferences and individual research activities of lecturers). The University mentors and orients new generations of creative, educated, community-building, ambitious young people who want to learn, respect national values, solidary and cooperative, who are also responsible for the future, to build Hungary and Europe with their best knowledge.

While modern Hungarian higher education has always included programmes focusing on the education and training of people primarily preparing for public service, Ludovika - UPS is the first university in the country exclusively dealing with the formation of future public servants. The university provides a motivating environment in which its employees serve the university's goals with the continuous development of their knowledge, a predictable vision and ambitions.

Free time activities and sightseeing in Budapest

Budapest is Hungary's capital and most populous city, and the ninth-largest city in the European Union. The history of Budapest began when an early Celtic settlement transformed into the Roman town of Aquincum, the capital of Lower Pannonia. The Hungarians arrived in the territory in the late 9th century. In 1241, at the time of King Bela IV, who was considered the second founder of Hungary, the Tatars devastated the Pannonian area. Re-established Buda became one of the centres of Renaissance humanist culture by the 15th century. Budapest, the capital of Hungary, was created in 1873 by merging three cities: Buda, Óbuda and Pest.

Opened in 1896, the city's subway system, the Budapest Metro, serves 1.27 million, while the Budapest Tram Network serves 1.08 million passengers daily. The central area of Budapest along the Danube River is classified as a UNESCO World Heritage Site. It has several notable monuments of classical architecture, including the Hungarian Parliament and the Buda Castle. The city also has around 80 geothermal springs, the largest thermal water cave system, second largest synagogue, and third largest Parliament building in the world.
